Traveling in style

For the fashion-conscious traveler, out-of-town trips can be costly when you figure in the luggage fees most airlines are charging.

Save time and money and be a savvy traveler like Washington, D.C.-based Julia Coney, who founded www.allaboutthepretty.net, a beauty, fashion and travel site.

Coney, who was raised in Texas, advocates all-in-one clothing, such as yoga-inspired pieces from Tranquil.it.com.

She usually travels with a wrinkle-free bamboo wrap dress she can wear eight ways and a cardi-shawl, which can be worn as a cardigan, hoodie and top.

Coney never carries shampoo, since most hotels have decent ones, but she brings her own conditioner.

To save space, she also uses dual cheek and lip stains and travel-size mascara and lip gloss. She also carries Essence of Beauty travel-size makeup brushes ($10 at CVS).

Coney advises creating a travel-ready kit. She keeps free-with-purchase cosmetic gifts, such as small tubes of creams, lipsticks and fragrances, in a box.
